Antiquities of Egypt.

THE following extract from the Quarterly Review for Dec. 1818, contains an account of Mr. CAVIGLIA's descent into the Well of the Great Pyramid :—

"The brief account of Mr. Davison's discoveries will enable us to appreciate the labours of another enterprising traveller, of whose extraordinary exertions, coolness and perseverance, and the brilliant discoveries to which they led, we have been favoured with a very interesting account, drawn up roughly by our consul-general, Mr. Salt, by whose zeal, personal exertions, influence with the pashaw, and great pecuniary liberality, many of the hidden treasures of Egypt have been brought to light; some of which have already found their way, and others are following, to that magnificent depository of nature and art, the British Museum.

The person to whom we allude is Mr. CAVIGLIA, the master, and, we believe owner of a mercantile vessel in the Mediterranean trade, 'who,' Mr. Salt informs us, 'was most actively employed, for a period of nearly six months, in carrying on his researches with a disinterested zeal that merits general admiration.'—Mr. Caviglia set out from Alexandria for Cairo, where he arrived on the 26th December, 1816, and immediately entered into an arrangement with two gentlemen of the names of Kabitgiet and La Fuentes, in consequence of which they were to accompany him, with ropes and other necessary apparatus, to the grand Pyramid; this they accordingly did on the 8th of Jan 1817.

The first object which Mr. Caviglia had in view was to examine the 'Well' in the chamber of the great pyramid, the descent to which, as it would seem, both he and Mr. Salt considered as an enterprise never yet accomplished;—that Well (it is Mr. Salt who speaks) 'which had so long baffled all research, and respecting which various rumors have been propogated of persons having been let down at different times, who never had returned to explain the mystery in which it was enveloped, a circumstance that had deterred many others from what was so generally considered as a desperate attempt.'

Mr. Caviglia, on reaching the chamber into which the mouth opens, fixed a rope round his waist, and, with a lamp in his hand, immediately began to descend, his friends remaining above to secure the ropes. He describes the several shafts of this Well pretty nearly in the same terms as Mr. Davison; and he met with the same difficulty in persuading an Arab to go down and assist him in the removal of several stones of granite which had choaked up the second shaft. The only novelty which we perceive is the fact of the shaft being lined with masonry above and below the grotto, to support, as was supposed, one of those incrustated beds of gravel which are frequently found in rock, and which the masons calls flaws. There was no difficulty in reaching the bottom; but the heat was found to be excessive, the air very impure; and the lamp soon began to burn with a faint and glimmering light. Finding nothing there but a collection of loose stones and rubbish, he hastened to return to his companions, but had scarcely time to reach the grotto, when all the lamps went out in rapid succession;—a circumstance that occasioned considerable alarm, and obliged the whole party to make a precipitate retreat.

Mr. Caviglia, however, was by no means satisfied with the result of this supposed first discovery of the bottom of the Well; but from the circumstance of the ground giving a hollow sound under his feet, he was satisfied that there must be some concealed outlet. With the view of making further discovery, he pitched his tent in front of the entrance of the great Pyramid, determined to set about excavating the bottom of the Well. He hired some Arabs to draw up the rubbish with baskets and cords; but from the reluctance of these people to work, notwithstanding the enormous wages given to them, he was compelled to suspend his operations and give up the enterprise, till an order from the Kiaya-bey had been procured, which had the effect of subduing their indolence, and, to a certain degree, of removing their prejudices. 'It is still,' says Mr. Salt, 'almost inconceivable how he could so far surmount the prejudices of these people, as to induce them to work in so confined a space, where a light, after the first half hour, would not burn, and where, consequently, every thing was to be done by feeling and not by sight; the heat at the same time being so intense and the air so suffocating that in spite of all precautions, it was not possible to stay below an hour at a time without suffering from its pernicious effects. At length, indeed it became so intolerable that one Arab was brought up nearly dead, and several others on their ascending, fainted away; so that at last, in spite of the command laid upon them they almost entirely abandoned their labour, declaring they were willing to work but not to die for it.'

Thus discouraged, Mr. Caviglia next turned his attention to the clearing of the principal entrance or passage of the pyramid which, from time immemorial, had been so blocked up as to oblige those who entered to creep on their hands and knees; hoping by this to give a free passage to the air. He not only succeeded in carrying his purpose into effect, but, in the course of his labours, made the unexpected discovery that the main passage, leading from the entrance, did not terminate in the manner asserted by Maillet, but (having removed several large masses of calcarious stone and granite, apparently placed there to obstruct the passage) that it still continued in the same inclined angle downwards, was of the same dimensions, and had its sides worked with the same care, as in the channel above, though filled up nearly to the top with earth and fragments of stone. Having proceeded to the length of 150 feet in clearing out this passage, the air began to be so impure and the heat so suffocating, that he had the same difficulties again to encounter with regard to the working Arabs. Even his own health was at this time visibly impaired, and he was attacked with a spitting of blood; nothing, however could induce him to desist from his researches.

By the 14th March he had excavated as low down as 200 feet in the new passage without any particular thing occurring, when shortly afterwards a doorway on the right side was discovered, from which, in the course of a few hours, a strong smell of sulphur was perceived to issue. Mr Caviglia having now recollected that when at the bottom of the Well, in his first enterprise, he had burned some sulphur for the purpose of purifying the air, conceived it probable that this doorway might communicate with it, an idea which, in a little time, he had the gratification of seeing realized, by discovering that the channel through the doorway opened at once upon the bottom of the Well, where he found the baskets, cords and other implements which had been left there on his recent attempt at a further excavation. This discovery was so far valuable as it afforded a complete circulation of air along the new passage, and up the shaft of the Well into the chamber, so as to obviate all danger for the future from the impurity of the atmospere.—Mr. Salt, after this, made the tour of the long passage, and up the shafts in the great gallery, without much inconvenience."

The "Writing Rock."

A few weeks ago we published an account of the Writing Rock, so called, in Taunton River.—The following remarks are copied from the Philadelphia Aurora :—

"As some of our readers may be curious to know something about this inscription, more plain than what is given in the eastern papers, we give the following explanations :

On the 13th September, 1768, Messrs. S. Sewall, Thomas Danforth, William Bayliss, Seth Williams, and David Cobb, discovered, on a large rock, on the margin of the sea, at Dighton, in Massachusetts, an inscription in strange characters. This inscription had been the subject of common conversation for more than fifty years, but was considered as some rude work of the Indians who had inhabited that quarter. Those citizens made a copy of the inscription, and copies were multiplied and sent to many learned men and learned bodies, in different parts of Europe.

Many attempts have been made to decypher it; the characters are partly alphabetical, partly hieroglyphical. We have a very accurate copy of it before us—and have made several attempts at interpretation and decyphering. The letters are Oriental, partaking of the characteristic forms of the Sanscrit and the Talic, and written from right to left; but the story, for it appears to be an historical record, begins on the left, and proceeds to the right, there being, apparently three acts, referring to the past, the present, and the future, and signifying whence the authors of the inscription came, their number and intercourse with the natives, and their intention to return whence they came: it is not possible to transcribe it without a drawing, but the apparent subject is, that the inscription was of persons, by sea from the eastward, who, on landing, paid their first devotions to the divinity of the country whence they came, that is Boodh, or the genius of fecundity; also, a symbol of Minerva and Isis. The head of a hawk indicates infinite wisdom, and also the north wind, which conducted them to the spot; there are some other figures and letters, which admit of many interpretations.

The second scene, which is in the then present, is more diffused and the figures dispersed; there is a vessel with its masts, flags, and long rudder, as in the oriental vessels at this day—there is a figure of a horse, which is the well-known symbol of Carthage. There is a human figure, or bust upon the breast of which is a TRIDENT, emblematic of Neptune and also of the oriental trinity of the good and evil, and of the mediatory powers; the same as Vichenou, Sieb, and Brama which, under one or another name, have been found in the religions of all nations.

The subject generally appears to be intended to commemorate the arrival of a people there from the ocean and the east, and who having had intercourse with the natives, had resolved to return, and had written thus on that rock, to commemorate that event; the characters indicate an oriental origin; but whether from Phœnicia or Carthage, or elsewhere, is not a certainable, than that it is of great antiquity; that it is a record of some kind cannot be a moment doubted. Though the hieroglyphics are many and crowded, yet there is a method in it which renders it, beyond doubt, intended to communicate facts, and the oriental characters are to be found in all the eastern alphabets."

Specie.

Yellow Stone Expedition.

Left Shippingport on Sunday morning last, the grand squadron, consisting of the steam boats Exchange, Jefferson, Johnston and Expedition, under the command of Col. James C. Johnston destined for the Yellow Stone, on the Missouri; having on board a detachment of United States' troops, and munitions of war, destined for that post.—The fifth boat, now lying at Shippingport, belonging to the same expedition will follow in a few days and join the squadron at St. Louis.

COLUMBIA.

WASHINGTON CITY MAY 25

The Boston Centinel has thrown out some hints respecting the Treaty recently concluded with Spain, but not yet ratified; which, as they are in part apparently founded on suggestions made in this paper, it may be proper to notice.

1. It is hinted that the Cabinet (that is, the Executive) have hopes that the Treaty will not be ratified by the King of Spain. This, we have reason to believe, is a great error. The eyes of the government were open, when they made the Treaty, to all the circumstances connected with it; and, had every foot of soil been granted by Spain, the Treaty would yet have been a valuable one. It was the sovereignty of the territory, and its appendant advantages, that was necessary to us, and not the land, of which even were it of the best quality, the government has already a fund sufficiently great for its wants, if not for its wishes.

2. As to the fact, that vast grants of land in Florida have been made by Spain, beyond the calculations of our government, we believe that the Editor of the Centinel has been misinformed as to the particulars, though not far wide of the general fact. It is true, we believe, that enormous nominal grants have been made, many of them to American merchants and speculators. But, it is also true, that nearly all those grants are utterly void. Of how much validity they are, may be inferred from the fact that some of the largest of them are laid on territory, (formerly part of Louisiana) which has been occupied by the United States many years, has been for some time included within a territorial government, and will soon become part of a sovereign state.

3. As to the conferences between Mr. Onis and Mr. Secretary Adams, the import of which is so confidently announced, and the nature of despatches alledged to have been transmitted to Spain, we cannot speak with any certainty, having no knowledge; but we are under the impression that the Editor of the Centinel has been led into error on those points, as on the others.

Finally, when we spoke of some "very respectable citizens" who would rejoice in the failure of the Treaty, we referred to individuals in the Western country, whose views have been disclosed in the western papers, and not to any persons in any manner connected with the government.—Nat. Intel.

MARYLAND.

BALTIMORE, MAY 28.

Neutrality.

The Circuit Court of the United States adjourned yesterday. The Grand Jury during their session found bills of indictment against 62 men for piracy, supposed to have been committed on board the brig La Irresistable; these persons composed the majority of the crew of that vessel. The commander, John F. Ferguson, and twelve of the crew have been arrested, and are now imprisoned in the gaol of Baltimore county; their causes having been continued by themselves upon affidavits, stating that there was material testimony absent, without the benefit of which they could not proceed to trial. It is not proper to say any thing about the merits of these cases until they have terminated.

The same Grand Jury have also found bills of indictment against ten or twelve persons for misdemeanors, supposed to have been committed by them in fitting out three different vessels in the Chesapeake Bay since the 3d March, 1817. The trial of John D. Daniels, one of the persons charged with a misdemeanor for fitting out the brig La Irresistable, called at the time of her leaving Baltimore, the Vacunia, came on for hearing at this term, and after a laborious investigation of four days, he was acquitted under the direction of the court, upon the ground that the law of the 3d March, 1817, under which he was indicted, had finally expired on the 3d of March, 1819; and that the act of the 20th of April, 1818, which repealed the former act, did not reserve the right of prosecuting offenders under the former act, after the 3d March, 1819. This opinion concluded of course, all the indictments which depended upon the same law.—There were however several bills of indictment found under the law of 20th of April, 1818, which were called up on Wednesday for trial, and in every case Mr. Glenn, the District Attorney, offered himself ready for trial; but the parties charged came forward in each case with affidavits stating the absence of winesses material for their defence, and praying a continuance of their cases; and as the affidavits were sufficiently broad to claim a continuance, the court of course granted it.

May 29

Mr Cheves, the President of the United States Bank, has arrived in this city from Philadelphia.

The run upon the Mechanics Bank, which commenced yesterday, was resumed this morning, and continued until about 12 o'clock when applications for specie had almost entirely ceased. These demands were met in a manner so prompt and liberal, by all the officers of the Bank, as to have a most salutary effect upon the minds of those who were influenced by erroneous impressions to give them a call.

NEW YORK

NEW-YORK, MAY 31.

Latest from England.

By the [illegible] Smyth, Capt Allen, arrived [illegible] from Liverpool, we have received London papers to the 19th April.

London, April 16—The letters obtained to day from the manufacturing districts are not so favourable as could be wished. In Lancashire the distress seems rather to [illegible] at Leicester it is said that [illegible] ten days, 5000 persons are [illegible] as being out of work. The [illegible] accounts from Liverpool are also of a gloomy description. The arrival of a number of ships from the United States was expected, which would occasion a further decline in the price of cotton.

Advices from Valenciennes speak in ominous terms of the exertions now making by the present War Minister for empowering France to assume such an attitude as shall become her military rank amongst the nations. The purport of this intelligence is as unconciliating to our interests as menacing to our fame; since, it appears the Douaniers now outstrip their usual zeal, and consider it nothing less than a triumph to seize upon British goods whensoever and wheresoever they possibly can.

The London Courier of the 12th of April, says—An attempt has been made to poison the emperor of Austria, in his passage through Mantua. This diabolical design, it seems, was meditated by a set of reformers, called the Carbonari, certain united individuals who imagine that Italy can never be well governed till its various states are united under one sceptre. The political relations of the House of Austria with the north of Italy are an obstacle in the way of this scheme—and with a degree of folly equalled only by the atrocity of the design it appears to have been believed, that destroying the head of that House would annihilate also, the matured policy of Europe which determined the existing condition of Italy. The absurdity of this supposition might excite only our derision, were it not for the profligacy of intention with which it is united. Assassination seems to be a growing favorite with the professors of liberal doctrines all over the world. It is an expeditious remedy for supposititious wrongs, well suited to the motives of those who complain. And we observe, there is always a mischievous spirit of ingenuity at work to contrive palliatives for the abhorrence of mankind at such attrocities. Thus, the Morning Chronicle thinks it "at least as probable, that the conspiracy alluded to, has been charged upon the members of this sect, or secret society, as a pretext to justify still harsher measures against them, as that any of them had actually compassed the death of the Emperor of Austria."

From Angostura.

A gentleman direct from Angostura, which he left on the 3d inst. informs that Mr. Irvine, the U. States agent left there on the 20th March, via St Thomas, on his return to the U. States, and may be daily expected. Bolivar was on the right bank of the Arauca with about 4000 men including a division of 900 Englishmen. Morillo was on the opposite side with 6000. A brilliant affair took place on the 11th of April between the cavalry of the patriot Gen Paez and a part of Morillo's force in which the royalists lost 500 men.

Benjamin Hazard, Dutee J. Pearce, and Wm. H. Vernon, were appointed a Committee to select an Orator for the 4th of July next, and the Town-Council was requested to appoint a Committee of Arrangements for that purpose, and to say what sum shall be appropriated for the expenses of that day.

The John Adams.

We learn that Capt. O. H. PERRY is expected to sail from Annapolis, in the John Adams, in the course of the ensuing week;—and that he will not be accompanied by the Ontario and Enterprize, as mentioned in the New-York papers.—Capt. Perry is expected to return in December next.

Late from Havanna.

Capt. Bartlett, arrived at New-York on Tuesday last, in 10 days from Havanna, informs, that the rumour on the subject of the cession of Cuba to Great-Britain, had subsided, or was only spoken of as idle and unfounded.

United States Bank Stock.

The New-York Mercantile Advertiser of Wednesday last, says,—"Fifty Shares of U. S. Bank Stock were sold in this City yesterday, at 92 per cent—and more were offered at that price."

Baltimore City Bank.

We copy the following article relative to this Bank, from the Baltimore Federal Gazette of Saturday last :—

"The City Bank, agreeably to their advertisement, have met the calls upon it in a corresponding manner; and when our paper went to press, the demand very essentially decreased. One or two of the other banks were teazed a little, but we presume by Monday morning all unnecessary excitement will cease.

(The following is the advertisement alluded to in the above article :—

"City Bank of Baltimore.—Notice is hereby given, that all notes of this institution, under Five Dollars, will be paid on presentation, and the bank will continue open for the collection of notes becoming due. The public are also informed, that the notes of this bank will be received in payment of all debts due it, on application to the acting cashier.

The board of directors assure the creditors of the City Bank, that they entertain no doubt whatever of the ability of the bank to meet all its engagements in a short time.

ROBERT BARRY, Cashier, pro tem."

We observe several advertisements of individuals, in the Baltimore papers, offering for sale farms, houses, lots, dry goods and various other merchandize, for the notes of the City Bank, at par. It would appear by the latest accounts, that the popular alarm and agitation had considerably abated, and was fast subsiding.

Baltimore Flour.

Flour was selling at Baltimore on Saturday last, from the waggons, at $5 per barrel.

President's Tour.

The President of the U. S. arrived at Augusta, (Georgia) on the 15th ult. and was received by the civil and military authorities, and the citizens, with every demonstration of respect. On Monday following he visited the U. S. Arsenal, and made an excursion to the Sandhills.—He left Augusta on Tuesday for Nashville, (Ten.) taking Washington, Lexington and Athens, in his route. His tour from Nashville would be regulated by circumstances.

An address was presented to the President, by the Mayor and citizens of Augusta, to which he returned the following answer :—

" The kind reception, and favorable opinion entertained of my public conduct, by the corporation and citizens of Augusta, have afforded me the highest satisfaction. From the nature of our government, which is founded on the sovereignty of the people, and purely representative, I well know that my fellow-citizens would disdain to express any sentiment, which was not approved by their judgment, and did not flow from the heart. Their approbation, therefore, of my humble services, from early life, affords me the greatest consolation, which a mind, conscious of having exerted its utmost faculties, in high truste, and often in perilous public emergencies, can receive.

The events of the late war having, as you justly observe, admonished us of the necessity of being better prepared for another, and Congress having made the necessary provision, I have thought it my duty by personal supervision and inspection so far as I might be able, to give all possible effect to that wise and salutary policy. It is under this sense of my duty, that I have endeavored to visit our maritime and inland frontiers, looking at the same time to other objects, intimately connected with the high trust committed to me. In thus performing this part of my duty, I have seen with inexpressible delight the most convincing proofs of the rapid growth and general prosperity of the country, with the good effects of our happy system of government, in every other circumstance in which government can be felt; a people enjoying every right; obedient to law; becoming daily more national and affectionate towards each other; universally prosperous, contented and happy. A people capable of organizing a government, which has secured to them so many blessings, will never want either the intelligence, the courage or the virtue, necessary to sustain it.

On the continuance of my best exertions to administer the government on its true principles, and thereby to strengthen and support them and to advance the prosperity of my country and the happiness of my fellow-citizens, you may confidently rely; seeking in return, only such support in the discharge of my duty, as the public interest may require, and such favorable opinion of my conduct and motives, on my retreat, as I may merit. I will add, that in such support, and favorable opinion, I confidently rely.

JAMES MONROE."

The following article we copy from the New-York American, whose editor has filled up the several columns of the official abstract of the Banks, published in our paper of the 22d ult.

RHODE ISLAND BANKS.

The following is a summary of the state of the Banks of Rhode-Island, according to a report made to the Legislature. The number of these institutions is, (of which there are 30 in operation besides 4 yet in embryo) and the amount of their capital, are somewhat disproportioned to the population of the state, which probably does not exceed 80,000, about that of Ontario county.—But the state of their concerns proves they are generally well managed—far better, we apprehend, than some of our country banks, which are perverted to the exclusive accommodation of the directors, and of their influential friends—while the public, for whose advantage they were contemplated, are left to struggle with difficulties, created in a great measure by these very institutions. It is to be wished our State would adopt, and strictly enforce, similar returns to that we now give.

SAVINGS BANK.

It has been some time in contemplation by sundry individuals, to promote the establishment of a Savings Bank for the town of Newport and its vicinity. In order to carry the plan into effect, the Charter, Constitution and By-Laws of some of the institutions already established in other places, have been procured. The motive of this publication is to call the public mind to a consideration of the subject. The object of the institution is to promote industry and frugality and the practice of saving among the poor and laboring classes of the community; and to assist them in accumulating property for their future benefit, by providing a safe and profitable mode of enabling industrious persons, of all descriptions, to invest such parts of their earnings or property, as they can conveniently spare in a manner which will afford them both profit and security.

The utility and success of similar institutions wherever they have been established, places their advantages to the community beyond dispute, and it is to be hoped, that gentlemen of property and influence, Pastors of religious congregations, preceptors of schools, heads of families, masters of vessels, master mechanics, guardians of orphans, and the friends of the widow, will become active promoters of so desirable an object.

A Meeting of the Citizens friendly disposed to this measure, is requested at the State-House on WEDNESDAY, June 9th, at 3 o'clock P. M. to take the subject of the Institution into consideration, and appoint a Committee to devise a Plan for its regulation, &c. to report the same at a future meeting.

[COMMUNICATED]

As every thing in relation to the first Settlers of this Town and Island, must be interesting to every lover of historical research, they no doubt will be pleased with the following minutes which are copied from an old memorandum book found among the books and papers of an aged female, lately deceased, a descendant from Governor EASTON.—This Book contains many ancient memorandums in various handwriting, but they chiefly relate to the Society of Friends.

" 25th of 1st mo. 1638.—Nicholas Easton and his two brother and John, came on board the [illegible]outh-Hampton to come to New[illegible]nd.

" 14th of 3d mo. 1638.—Nicholas Easton with his two sons came on shore at N[illegible]England, and lived at Ipswich [illegible] then to Nubery, and there [illegible]ted the first settling of [illegible]

" [illegible] beginning of this year [illegible]mpton and built there, [illegible]; by our purchase by difference [illegible] the government, we went to Rhode-Island and builded at Portsmouth, at the Cove, and planted there this year.

" 1st of 3d mo. 1639.—We came to Newport—we came by boat to an Island which we named Coasters-Harbour.

" The last of 7th mo. 1639.—We came to Newport and builded the first English house that was built there."

In the year 1650 & '51, the above mentioned NICHOLAS EASTON was President of the Colony, and 1672 & 3, was Governor—He died in the year 1675, at the advanced age of 83 years, and was buried in the Coddington burying-ground, where his tomb-stone is yet standing.—By the preceeding extracts it is ascertained with certainty, how Coasters-Harbor Island acquired its name, and at what period, and by whom the first House was built in Newport.—It is supposed that by such minutes, now perhaps laying in the garrets of some of the descendants of the first settlers much important historical matter might be obtained relating to the settlement of this Town and State.—It is very desirable that those who have them, may be awakened to their value, and when discovered, that care may be taken to preserve them—scraps of this kind, however old or seemingly useless, may be of the greatest importance to the future historian and to the community.—It is deeply regretted that many valuable manuscripts of the Coddington family have been lost, or mislaid, as justice to the memory of their venerable ancestor WILLIAM CODDINGTON, has never been done or attempted, excepting in Callender's Century Sermon.

Those best acquainted with the early history of this Town and State, are fully satisfied that WILLIAM CODDINGTON, and NICHOLAS EASTON, did much more to secure our civil and religious liberty, than ROGER WILLIAMS, of whom so much has recently been written.

From the Providence American, of Yesterday.

The Annual Convention of the Episcopal Church of this State convened in this town on Tuesday last, when the Right Reverend Bishop Griswold delivered an interesting and instructive Discourse, pointing out to the delegates their important duties, exhorting them to active zeal and Christian liberality. From the reports of the respective Ministers, we are informed, the state of the Church is flourishing, its communion increasing, and vital piety continuing to adorn its members. The Sunday schools in the respective parishes are flourishing, and have already been productive of much good; and in many instances great proficiency has been made by the scholars; and we hope many have here learned the things that belong to their peace. A Resolution was passed for supplying the destitute children with Bibles. On the same evening, the Reverend Mr. Wheaton, of Newport, delivered an appropriate Discourse before the Church Missionary Society, of this State; but we regret that the unfavourable weather prevented many of our citizens from attending and being gratified in hearing the Reverend Preacher on the interesting subject of his discourse.

From the Baltimore Telegraph, May 27

Distresses.—We have several times adverted to the distresses of the day, and should feel timed in resuming the subject, were it not the paramount topic in all papers—in all places, and on all occasions. The famous South Sea scheme in England; the execrated Mississippi Scheme in France—each produced in their turns the same terror—the same ruin, and the same distress which our city feels at this juncture. The fallacy of our banking systems was never so obvious as now; and while we see our monied institutions on the verge of ruin—our wealthiest, and some of our worthiest citizens falling about us—their tributaries without subsistence, and their creditors without redress, we cannot wonder that so many rapid revolutions are made in our systems of finance and economy; nor can we be surprised that so many are stripping off the tawdry trimmings of dishonourable vanity, and mourning, though too late, that their pride has carried them beyond their resources, and has left them beyond the reach of relief. The gay crowd of fashionists, that but yesterday were strutting in Market-street, in all the pomp of haughty ostentation, are no more seen. The streets are now thronged only with astonished victims, studying their various modes of ruin or remedy.

The sober reality has at last found its way to the toilette; wives and daughters now hear the story of distress, and are told that their gay gewgaws must be laid aside; that routs and plays must be relinquished; that industry must take the place of luxurious indolence, and that pride must yield to poverty, or the drawing room be exchan[illegible]. Our whole city presents an [illegible] gloom, which would hardly be equ[illegible] during the reign of pestilence—and, though we are far from wishing to give strangers the alarm, we feel a conviction that the shock of this period will carry us back with a retrogression more rapid than our advance, and will for years shroud many a face with mourning that has been always a stranger to care; long will our industry toil in vain to repair this vast wreck of its efforts, and long will it mourn over our crumbling palaces, before the work of redemption is accomplished.

Married,

In this town on Thursday evening last, by the Rev. Mr. Miller, Mr. WILLIAM SPOONER to Miss HANNAH DUNFEE, daughter of Mr. Benjamin Dunfee.

Died,

At Tiverton on Sunday last, Mr. PHILIP SEABURY, in an advanced age.

Drowned, in James River, opposite Richmond, (Virginia) on the 27th of May, Mr. WILLIAM JAMES, of this town.—He has left a wife and children, to lament his sudden death.

POETRY.

From the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

TO MAY.

Stanzas, written in a Garden, during a visit to New-Haven, May 5, 1819.

HAIL, lovely nymph! with ruby lip,
And playful mien—and laughing eye:
All nature greets thy downy step,
That comes to check the wretched's sigh.
Thy zephyr-form that bends to give
The blushing rose its annual kiss,
Constrains the throb of joy to live,
In hearts that dream no more of bliss.

Thy breath perfumes the glitt'ring grove
Where night has been to weep unseen;
The lark pours forth her song of love,
And woos her partner o'er the green—
Wak'd by thy touch, yon loaded bough
Exulting lifts its blossom'd pride;
While this sweet bud that peeps below,
May haply bloom—when that has died.

Ah, no! this heart can better tell,
How sadly all thy flow'rets perish—
The fairest too, that scent the vale,
That love and hope had join'd to cherish—
And when thy day of sweets is done,
This truth the soul will oft discover—
That "soon the May of life is gone,
And soon the spring of youth is over!"

Since last I loiter'd in thy bow'r,
Where all thy gayest verdure flourish'd;
Stern death has grasp'd as fair a flow'r
As genius' kindred dews had nourish'd.
Its feeble form nor grief could save,
Nor can thy balmy breeze restore it—
Ah seek the child of fancy's grave,
And strew thy choicest garlands o'er it!

When winter strips thy green retreat
And thou art fled to softer climes;
Still oft I haunt the once lov'd seat,
To muse on former, happier times.
And seem to hear some gentle moan,
Of spirit whisp'ring in the blast,
That tells me, all my joys are flown,
And all my days of peace are past.

Oh could I bid the scenes return,
That once in childhood dawn'd around me;
Ere sorrow taught this heart to mourn,
When in her dark recess she found me;
Then might my burning lips again
Taste the pure cup of guileless pleasure,
That grief so oft has turn'd to pain,
With drops of gall to swell its measure!

But all are gone—so lov'd, so dear—
I never thought their smiles so fleeting;
Till, (bright as infant's earliest tear,)
They fled, while high my hopes were beating.
Yet why lament their viewless flight?
Since life's but morning's gliding vapour;
Friendship, and truth, and warm delight,
But flashes from the gleaming taper.

And e'n the rose on beauty's grave,
Fades ere its fragrance wanders hither—
As near the Tinto's* golden wave,
Each luckless plant is doom'd to wither
But tho' fair nymph! thy flow'ring reign
My bosom ne'er may charm again—
On the sweet shore that gave thee birth,
Love's dearest ties no stroke can sever;
Where, safe from all the storms of earth,
Thy budding arbours bloom forever!
